Overview

Tequila is a small town in Jalisco, about an hour from Guadalajara, and the home of the drink that carries its name. The countryside around it is covered in blue agave fields, and the landscape and the old distilleries are on the World Heritage List. The town has a pretty square, a church and many tasting rooms.

It suits a day trip from Guadalajara or a night in a hacienda hotel. Visitors come to tour distilleries, taste tequila and see the agave fields.

When to visit

The climate is warm and dry from November to May. June to October is the rainy season, with afternoon storms. The agave fields are green in the rains and golden in the dry season.

The national tequila fair is held in late November and December.
